Principal's Report

I am sure you are all reflecting on a most successful Apple Day. This success was due to the hardworking efforts of our P&C in their organisation and planning for this big day as well as our wider parent body in providing their assistance volunteering on the day, selling raffle tickets and baking.

A HUGE thank you must go to Chrissy Wursten for her tireless work towards this event. Chrissy is also our parent representative on the Apple Day Committee and this is an on-going role throughout the year. I am sure you would join me in acknowledging the enormous contribution Chrissy has given to this event.

NAPLAN assessments commence next week for grades 3 and 5. We wish them all the best and also ask parents to ensure the attendance of children in these grades during these assessments wherever possible.

Jared French returns to our Active After School clubs delivering Basketball coaching on Tuesday afternoons and we welcome Kelly McKellar who will be coaching Hockey on Wednesday afternoons. We thank them for being involved and ensuring the success of this program. Please be considerate and collect children promptly at 4:30pm from after school clubs. We ask that you also talk to your child/ren about good behaviour at after school activities as it would be a shame to exclude a student due to poor behaviour.

All prizes have been delivered to winners.

Unfortunately we had some raffle tickets not returned to school or to the P & C. We have legal obligations to ensure all tickets purchased have a fair chance in the raffle, therefore we require any books/money returned to school immediately as we legally only have 7 days after the draw to return money to those who purchased tickets and were not included in the draw. The Treasurer would also like to finalise figures and complete the report for the next P & C meeting.

PLEASE NOTE BELOW NSW GOVERNMENT INFORMATION REGARDING OUR LEGAL REQUIREMENTS REGARDING RAFFLES.

Whilst APPLE DAY is fresh in everyone's minds, please feel free to make suggestions for next year and comment on what we could do better and what we did well.

What is a raffle?

A raffle is a lottery where the total value of prizes does not exceed $25,000. Prizes are determined by a draw of tickets or marbles from a barrel or other receptacle, or by an electronic device (often called a random number generator).

What is the format of tickets?

Ticket-butts must be numbered consecutively in the same series as the ticket. If the total value of the prizes exceeds $5,000, ticket-butts must also contain space for the name and address of the purchaser to be written.

How should the draw be conducted?

Every person who has purchased a ticket in a raffle must have a fair and equal chance of winning every prize in the raffle when drawn.

Raffle organisers cannot impose a condition requiring a ticket-holder to be present at the draw to claim a prize in the raffle.

All prizes must be distributed by the drawing of ticket-butts or numbered marbles from a barrel or other suitable container. The receptacle should be large enough to allow all butts or marbles to be included and mixed freely.

An electronic drawing machine may be used, if the program used to draw the numbers is in fact random, and every number entered into the draw has a fair and equal chance of being drawn. If unsure, contact the supplier.

If more than one prize is offered, the major prize should be the first drawn. Then the other prizes should be drawn in descending order according to number and value.

Sellers of tickets must return to the organisers all ticket-butts (or appropriate computer-generated document) relating to tickets sold by them, the proceeds of sales, and all unsold tickets issued to them before the date fixed for the draw of the prizes or at any earlier date that the organisers may require.

If a ticket is not included in the draw, the organisers must use best endeavours to refund the price to the ticket owner within 7 days after the draw is held.

The draw should be conducted at the place, date and time shown in any information provided to purchasers.

If a ticket purchaser or other person wants to attend the draw, the organisers should facilitate this.
